College Athletics

Professionalism On Campus

All our life we have been told that atbletic participation builds good character. Everywhere we turn we see the athlete held up as an example to be emulated for he is the leader of men.

Yet we never have to look very far to find refutations of these glowing words. Ten years ago, there was the University's "fabulous five" and the startling revelation that members of the nation's best basketball team had been guilty of accepting bribes to shave points so that New York gamblers could fatten themselves on bets made on games that should have been won by greater margins.

This year several college basketball players, including the captain of the Southeastern Conference champions, have been involved in the thing-point shaving.

Perhaps the heart of the problem lies in the fact that athletics are overemphasized in America's colleges and universities. College athletics have moved far from their original aimsphysical fitness and recreation-and have been replaced with a form of professionalism differing from that of the professional sports only in degree. There is certainly no difference in motivation.

College athletics have been tainted with the ideals-or lack of idealsof professionalism. The cardinal sin of college athletics is losing, and high-powered recruiting programs and big-spending athletic associations have sprung up to avert the stigma of defeat.

It has become the practice in college athletics to do anything to build winning teams while avoiding the only stigma comparable to losinggetting eaught.

It is from this attitude of professionalism, perlups, that such seandals as the basketball point shaving instances spring up. An athlete in the employ of a university athletic association has little more compunction to turn down a better offer from a gambler than a plumber has to turn down a higher-priced job.

It is this attitude that must stamped out if college athletics are ever to be returned to the proper perspective and such events so detrimental to the ideals of higher education prevented. Many in the sports world relize the problem, but we doubt if all those closely affiliated with athletic conferences and their members do.

After stating that there is more bonesty in athletics than he could remember in 20 years, newly Big 10 Commissioner William R. Reed said last week, "Intercollegiate sports exist within the framework of educational institutions and therefore justify themselves in my eyes only so long as they support the integrity, dignity, and purposes higher education."

Reed stated the very reason why University of Chicago, while striving for educational recognition and high professional dignity, chose to resist the tide of professional college athletics and do away with its intercollegiate sports program.

He also pointed out very clearly why college athleties may be forced out of existence. There are many who would prefer to see athletic professionalism removed from the eampus and relegated to the citys' athletic arenas where it belongs.

If sports are not eleaned up, that is just where they will end up.

Military Ball Debt

To The Editor:

While I can appreciate the concern of memhers of your staff about the debt owed to the Student Congress by the three honorary student societies, your article on page 8 of the Kentucky Kernel for Thursday, April 27, 1961, contains several errors of fact.

First, the debt is not, and never has been, $2,200 as you state. In February of 1959, a loan of $1,500 was made to the Army and Air Force ROTC units to finance a Military Ball. On June 23, 1959, a payment of $666.65 was made to the Student Congress account, leaving a balance of $833.35 due on the debt.

Apparently, nothing was paid on this debt during the 1959-1960 school

Shortly after assuming the duties of professor of military science in August of 1960, I was appraised of this debt. In conjunction with Col. Roland W. Boughton, professor of aerospace science, a complete survey was made of the situation, and an agreement was reached with the three military societies and with the Division of Accounting and Budgetary Control to establish a Military Ball account. Into this account, one-half of all profits of each Military Ball are to be deposited each year, until the debt to the Student Council is repaid.

At this time, there are still three outstanding bills for the 1961 Military Ball. While it can not be determined exactly, it appears that a small payment (approximately $35.00) will be made in the near future towards the debt from this year's profits. This process will be continued until the debt is liquidated.

In summary, the debt is owed by three honorary student ROTC societies, not by the ROTC; there ARE plans to pay off the debt; the debt never was as high as your article stated, and the debt will be paid.

University Soapbox

Key To SC Success

To The Editor:

The mass student apathy of this University is increasing as the years pass. We need only to look at the increasing number of carepus functions that have or are dying out. Prominent examples are Lances' Carnival, Greek Week, float participation, big weekends, and the weak student body enthusiasm over eampus politics and organizations. Those students of at least three years' vintage can readily testify to this decline,

While this apathetic situation may bave many solutions, a strong possibility would be a well organized, properly functioning student government. The key to a successful dent government is a Student Congress based on a workable constitution.

If Mr. Terrell's statement that "he felt safe in assuming that not 10 percent of the assembly members could not now inform their constituency of half the policies they approve," is correct then it seems logical that the present constitution is not adequate if it lets such "dead wood" personnel continue to represent the student body. Such conservative thinking as "it would be unwise for the assembly to attempt curing constitutional ills which it cannot say with certainty exist," is not the answer, progressive action is the

A careful observation of the federal constitution's composition of the United States Congress could be the solution of our Student Congress problem. The United States has 50 states, with 100 senators and 435 representatives in the House, who represent approximately 180 million University of Kentucky people. The has eight colleges, with 99 assemblymen representing about 7,000 students

Although the Student Congress is a unicameral legislature, there is no reason why it can not incorporate some of the advantages of a bicameral legislature. It is generally accepted that history has proved that strongest governments are run by small coalitions or dictators. If 535 United States Congressmen ean represent 180 million people, does it not seem absurd to have 7,000 students represented by 99 assemblymen whose attendance record is an utter disgrace. The University of Kentucky Student Congress should apportion its seats according to the population of the colleges and reduce its membership to some number around 40, to which the apportionment would arrive. With this small size legislative body, a real majority could be reached and its members would be properly informed.

This still leaves one possible problem; who should constitute this "elite 40"? The Kernel has the right and could publish the names of the members regularly attending Student Congress meetings, and give these persons proper recognition. It would then be up to the student body to elect these conscientious persons and eliminate the "dead wood" members whose sole contribution is to leave the impression that student congress

If campus political; apathy is to be conquered, Student Congress is the answer. Perhaps some solid legislation and assertion of prestige might ignite a flame that will help this campus rise out of its present doldrums.

Instead of toying around with suelt nonsense as grammar perfection and the expulsion of members which only hurts Student Congress, why follow an example which has stood the test of time, the United States system of representation? Let's face it, no amateur constitutionalist at the University of Kentucky can ever top the masterpiece created by our "founding fathers," who I do not believe can be considered as conserv-

Marry Now?

Is there anything wrong with students marrying while attending college? Should the nation be concerned?

Most observers are inclined not to get involved in this question. Some members of society show no concern, yet others are indignant.

Prof. Margaret Mead, anthropologist at Columbia University, has expressed her views on the subject.

Intellectual life demands some kind of postponement of domesticity, she says. Early student marriage is tying down men so early that they don't have a chance for full intellertual growth, she continues.

Professor Mead believes young people need to develop as individuals, to think, to change their minds and to explore.

If there is a baby before graduation, "it means the father's term paper gets mixed up with the baby's Babies are engrossing objects, and if men and women are going to devote all their time to infants, who will be left to write great works or build airships?" she asks.

Married students on the whole are good students, but only in the sense that they get through their examina-

They make the necessary marks because they have to get the next degree, so they can get the next joh or fellowship grant so they can support their children.

Along national lines, Professor Mead issues a grave warning. Early marriages will lead to a settled, security-loving unadventurous people.

"It is going to curtail seriously the contribution that we can make us a nation to the development of civiliza-tion on this planet," she concludes.

Spring Teams Are 'Winningest'

Kentucky's spring sports teams are off and winning in a fashion which is rapidly making them the "winningest" combination of UK basehall, tennis, golf, and track teams in the school's history.

Going into yesterday's schedule, which had listed all but the trackmen in action before the rains came, the four 1961 units had combined for a 40-12-1 mark. This record gives them an aggregate percentage of .782—a pace which will easily mean a school record if it ean be maintained.

The previous four-team best is a .633 percentage recorded by last year's teams on a 47-27-1 ledger. The 1947 athletic units were nearly as proficient, racking up a 30-17-2 mark for a .632 percentage.

The 47 total wins recorded by last year's squads is the most the spring teams have ever notched. With 40 wins already under their belts, the '61 athletes seem destined to beat the figure.

Again, it is the Cat baseballers who are leading in games won as victory skein snapped Saturday in Harry Lancaster's crew shows a their loss to Marshall.

standouts such as Tom Hutchin-son, who has established himself as one of the most versatile com-petitors in the SEC, distance ace Keith Locke, hurdlers Ben Pat-terson and Art Travis, and weight man Lowell Stevens. Bailard Moore's high-flying tennis team delights in the best mark—percentage wise—among UK spring sports squads. It earried an .857 percentage into yesterday's match at Morehead.

A recerd of 12 wins against only to losses tied the netmen with the 1929 and 1960 Kentucky teams for most tennis matches won in a season, and the Cats were favored to pick up the record-breaking 13th triumph over the Eagles yesterday.

Charlie Daus and Don Sebolt have set the pace from their No. 1 and No. 2 spots and give the elub hopes of high placement in this year's SEC tourney. Don Dreyfuss No. 3, and Dave Braun, No. 4, have also been big '61 winners.
